

A WORD OR 2

Mba Mbulu, Editor

02-21-07

©2007 All Rights Reserved

“Black Nationalism is the only real solution for Black People in the United States.”

Barack Obama Or Osama bin Laden * MAFIA COUNTRY

It seems that Black People in the United States are obsessed with getting an African American elected president. Could it be that that objective represents the trappings of yet another group psychological illness; something akin to an African American psychosis or African American neurosis?

Every four or so years it hits African Americans, and African Americans start talking as if a lot of problems would be solved if an African American were deemed worthy of occupying the Oval Office.

But the United States is not going to change if an African American is elected president. What will change, for the worse, is how the rest of the world views Black People who call themselves African Americans. African Americans will be viewed less and less as victims of white power's excesses and more and more as its accomplices. In my opinion, that is a serious move in the wrong direction.

Persons in visible positions, like Colin Powell, Clarence Thomas and Condoleeza Rice (to name a few), have tried to do little or nothing to change the behavior of white power. All they do is march to white power's beat, like a tonto, and generate unnecessary hell and stress for simple people whose only ambition is to make a decent living for themselves and their families. An African American president will march to white power's beat more rigidly than any other African American official has, and act more like a tonto than any other African American has.

So African Americans need to snap out of that mental abyss or take a huge enough dose of the proper medication. African Americans need to accept the indisputable truth that an African American president will be more concerned about pleasing white America than African Americans.

I could understand Arab-Americans getting excited if they thought Osama bin Laden had a chance of getting elected President of the United States of America. They could be confident that Osama would try to

From 1776 until 1916, the United States government functioned, fought wars, expanded and became the most powerful military force in the world. During that entire 140 year period, no one who worked in this country had to pay income taxes. That type of tax was forbidden by the US constitution. In 1916, a law was passed that required corporations to pay taxes on their profits, and any worker who volunteered to pay income taxes could do so. But no worker was required to do so.

Since 1916, no law has been passed that requires workers in the United States to pay income taxes. Yet the Internal Revenue Service is the most feared agency in a country that is loaded with agencies that the average citizen is afraid of. Why? Because the IRS functions like the Mafia. It tells the citizens of this country that they owe money they do not owe, and roughs up those who refuse to pay.

If you think you are cheating if you play with the numbers around tax time, you need to come up with a different crime to commit. As far as income taxes go, you are the victim of the crime, not the perpetrator. The IRS, an agency of what you call your country, is committing extortion against you. You need to ally yourself with people who are trying to do something about it.

change the country big time. But an African American Osama? I don't think that creature exists, and if he or she did, being elected president of a nation of terrorists would not interest her (or him).

BE BLACK SMART